the eyes of death
THE EYES OF DEATH:
THE VISUAL MOVEMENT FROM WITNESS TO SPECTATOR

Submitted for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy
By Zeynep Dagli

School of Media, Communication and Culture
MURDOCH UNIVERSITY
2008
Acknowledgments:

This Ph.D. journey has been intense, emotional and passionate. Without the wonderful people who have helped me on the way with their support, understanding and patience the completion would be impossible. Into the destination of grief, mourning and remembrance I dedicate this study to the loving memory of S.H. whose body was confined to bed three and a half years in a coma and who left us on 15 March 2007. I am indebted to S.H.’s family for giving me permission to dedicate this study to her memory and document her dying process.

For strength, eternal support, love, care, motivation and for always keeping me sane, giving me courage throughout the research process my deepest thanks to my excellent parents Figen and Ismet Dagli, and my brother Murat Dagli for his profound feedback, perceptive comments and insights on the text and his wise advice and support.

I am deeply grateful to Professor Tara Brabazon who accepted this project, for her exceptional supervision, penetrating inspiring critique, insightful, motivating and encouraging approach. The submission of this Ph.D. became only possible with her mentorship and guidance. I cannot imagine having a better supervisory support if not Professor Tara Brabazon’s incomparable energy and enthusiasm.

I thank my loving friend Nina Dimitriadi 11 who has not only shared the Ph.D. journey with me but also helped me to find first Chris Mullen who has made this project acceptable for a doctoral study, and then Professor Tara Brabazon who has nurtured this project patiently and passionately for completion. I also thank you long lasting friends film-maker Caglar Kimyoncu for his mentoring and Canadian independent researcher Rob Mathers for conversations and debating with me on the subject matter, and special thanks to all the dedicated friends Phillip Pergolas, Ozben Saygun, Richard Schofield, Anthony Star, Dan Weber, Berke Demirkan, Atilla Abana, Ada Helin and Matthew Swiezynski for their collaborative effort on filming process, archival and technical help. In particular I must acknowledge the influence and support of the Greek poet and musician Diamanda Galâs for letting me use her music and trusting me to commence with O’Death.

Undoubtedly without memory, without love, support and trust of people, without the companionship of family and friends, and great supervisor Professor Tara Brabazon, there would be endless struggle where everything sinks into despair. I thank you, from the bottom of my heart, everybody who has made this project possible and has been a powerful advocate and ally throughout the research.
List of Contents

Acknowledgments.................................................................................................................iii
List of contents.........................................................................................................................v
List of exhibitions......................................................................................................................vii
List of illustrations....................................................................................................................viii
Abstract........................................................................................................................................ix
Glossary.........................................................................................................................................xi
Preface..........................................................................................................................................xvii

Introduction: What - and how - to talk about death, dying and suffering ....................1
   Research in and through practice: ................................................................. 7
   Theoretical and methodological palette: ....................................................... 14
   Sovereign absence: ................................................................................. 31

Chapter One: On apathy and the witness: ................................................................. 35
   The existential encounter of the witness: perceiving subject ................... 38
   Fear ............................................................................................................ 43
   Anguish ..................................................................................................... 53
   Apathy ...................................................................................................... 61

Chapter Two: On disaster and the other: ............................................................. 71
   The existential encounter of the witness: the perceived object struck by disaster ............................................................................................... 74
   Maurice Blanchot and the language of the impossible ......................... 79
   The gap .................................................................................................... 83
   One’s own other .................................................................................... 89
   The responsibility to/for disaster and one’s own other............................ 99

Chapter Three: On representation and the spectator: ......................................... 105
   From witness to spectator ..................................................................... 107
   This is not scaremongering, this is really happening .......................... 117
   The spectator’s stunt ............................................................................. 123

Chapter Four: The eyes of death: ................................................................. 132
Appendix Videos

Apathy is the first film that complements the first chapter. The url is: http://vids.myspace.com/index.cfm?fuseaction=vids.individual&videoid=5814533

Disaster is the second one that complements the second chapter. The url is: http://vids.myspace.com/index.cfm?fuseaction=vids.individual&videoid=5815399

O'death is the very last films that complement the fourth and the last chapter. The url is: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=L5irZ1mS984

The other: - url not available please contact library adt@murdoch.edu.au