Contributing Authors

Amadu W. Barrie is employed by the Department of Human Services (DHS) agency, Centrelink as an Information Technology (IT) graduate in the National Support Office (NSO) in Canberra. He joined Centrelink in August 2006 after graduating with a degree in Information Systems (BIS) at the Edith Cowan University (ECU) in Perth WA. He is the secretary of the Association of Sierra Leonean Journalists in Exile (ASALJIE) Australia Inc. and a Branch Executive Member (BEC) of the Australian Computer Society (ACS) Canberra Branch. Amadu also held positions as secretary of both the Australian Computer Society (ACS) WA Branch Young IT Committee (YITWA) and a Youth development project organised by African migrants in Perth, the Perth Dynamo Club (PDC). Among some of its objectives PDC aims to promote soccer and African culture in WA as well as Australia-wide.

Dr Val Colic-Peisker is a Research Fellow at Murdoch University, Western Australia, in the interdisciplinary area of migration studies. She is a political scientist/sociologist and has taught sociology at Murdoch University and the University of Western Australia. Val is co-director, (with Farida Tilbury and Nonja Peters), of an ARC Discovery project on the impact of ‘visible difference’ on refugees’ employment outcomes. Her recent publications include Split Lives: Croatian Australian Stories (Fremantle Arts Centre Press, 2004), Homeland Wanted: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on the Refugee Resettlement in the West (co-edited with Peter Waxman) (Nova Science Publishers, 2005) and “‘At Least You’re the Right Colour”: Identity and Social Inclusion of Bosnian Refugees in Australia’, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies (July 2005).
Pernilla Ellies is currently Health Promotion Coordinator for the North Metropolitan Area Health Service Population Health program. Previously she was project nutritionist with the Association of Services for Torture and Trauma Survivors (ASeTTS) working on the Good Food for New Arrivals program.

Dr Angela Fielding is a senior lecturer in the Department of Social Work & Social Policy at Curtin University. She has worked with refugees for more than 15 years. Angela is currently preparing two research projects for publication: community hospitality in relation to asylum seekers; and, with David Sang, collective resilience in refugee groups. In 1992, she co-authored "Ethnicity, Immigration and Mental Illness" (together with Laksiri Jayasuriya and David Sang). Her research interests include refugee children.

Dr Danielle Gallegos is currently a Senior Researcher with the Centre for Social and Community Research at Murdoch University. Her research interests include health and diversity, food and identity, food insecurity and social policy and community engagement. Previously she was a project nutritionist with the North Metropolitan Area Health Service working on the Good Food for New Arrivals program.

Brian Griffiths is an Adjunct Associate Professor in the School of Psychology at Curtin University. His research interests are in the social psychology of attitudes, attribution theory, and the psychology of religion.

[Photo: Those who know me would agree that to include a photo in the volume would cause needless suffering to the aesthetically sensitive readers.]
Nicolette Macdougall was awarded a first class honours degree in Sociology from Murdoch University in 2004 and commenced her PhD in 2005. The project, African Women in Australia— the journey from refugee to African-Australian, focuses on the formation and re-formation of social bonds within emerging African communities in Perth and the level of support and stability these bonds provide for refugees settling in Australia.

Anne Pedersen is an applied social psychologist at Murdoch University. Her research interests involve prejudice and its repercussions, in particular with respect to asylum seekers and Indigenous Australians.

Irena Quinn has a Master Degree in Human Service Counseling. She has been working within the migrant/refugee area for six years. Irena has also had extensive experience working with primary and secondary school children as a teacher. Irena is interested in research regarding gender, migration and refugee issues. She is a researcher and contributor for the Historical Encyclopedia of WA (“The Russians”) which is due out in 2007. She was also a researcher and one of curators of the exhibition “Russian Settlement in WA” as part of Perth Winter Arts Festival 2005, which attracted more than 12,500 people.

Dr David Sang has been teaching and researching in cross-cultural and health psychology for the last 15 years at the University of Western Australia, Australia. Also a registered psychologist, he has been involved in the Australian Government’s Better Outcomes in Mental Health Care & Counselling Initiative. In Dr Farida Tilbury is a Senior Lecturer in Sociology and Community Development at Murdoch University. She has undertaken research into cross-cultural friendship, migration and settlement issues (including rural settlement, employment, education and training issues), ethnic identity, racism and anti-racism, family issues in culturally diverse communities, health issues and mental health issues. She is currently undertaking research in the area of citizenship and multiculturalism. Dr Tilbury has published widely, recently completing a commissioned co-edited book, for the Office of Citizenship and Multicultural Interests, on migrant contributions to Western Australia, and is currently working on a book on race and ethnicity in Australia.

Marianne Turner is a secondary trained language teacher who has had experience teaching across all age groups in Australia, Japan, the UK and Spain. Her recent teaching experience includes five years of teaching English as a Second Language (ESL) to migrants and refugees at TAFE, and it was this experience which led to her current PhD project of investigating the orientation to learning of South Sudanese refugees in Western Australia. As well as completing her PhD, she continues to work with ESL students at Murdoch University - especially South Sudanese students - for the Teaching and Learning Centre and Equity Office, and also conducts study skills workshops for the Teaching and Learning Centre.
Peter Wakholi is married with four daughters. Originally from Uganda, he has lived in Australia, for fifteen years. He currently works with the Education Department as a high school teacher and is also affiliated to the School of Social Sciences and Humanities at Murdoch University where he is pursuing a PhD in the area of “African migrant–descendant youth and the Arts”. He is a practising artist/Educator and cultural activist.

Sue Watt is a lecturer in social psychology at the University of New England. Her research interests are broadly in the psychology of prejudice and discrimination.

[Photo: Those who know me would agree that to include a photo in the volume would cause needless suffering to the aesthetically sensitive readers.]